

General information

The British Growers Association Ltd are organising the event on behalf of the International Society for Horticultural Science.

The organisers of the event are continually monitoring the global and local situation of the Covid-19 pandemic. In the instance that the event has to abide by social distancing and other safety restrictions, the organisers have several levels of alternative plans that can be put into motion.

ISHS have stipulated that at the moment there will not be a provision to hold a fully virtual event. This decision has been made as they see the great benefit of the many networking opportunities at the conference. If under UK law the conference is not legally allowed to proceed the event will be postponed until a suitable date in 2022. If this were to occur we would work with yourselves, and ISHS to ensure that an optimum date

If the conference has to adhere to any restrictions in order to run the event the organisers will work closely with you to keep you informed of ongoing changes. Alternative and innovative arrangements will be made in order to publicise your much appreciated sponsorship.

If you wish to sponsor the Symposium by taking out one of our packages, please email info@carrotsymposium.com. The British Growers team will then issue you with a contract and a set of terms and conditions.

If you would like any more details about the sponsorship opportunities or would like to raise any questions please contact info@carrotsymposium.com
